BMW 2002 Early Nose. '67-73

This nose was cut from a fairly clean 2002 in about 2008, and has been stored inside then. I have had the opportunity to cut and save well over 1000 2002 noses over the years, and I have saved less than 20 because most are simply not worth keeping (I have a few remaining), even here in California. This is my last remaining early nose.

This nose looks to be a replacement nose, which explains why it has no rust, a rarity for a 40 year old nose panel. Welds at the fenders and some body sealant on top of the paint indicate this was installed more recently than the original assembly.

It is in good shape everywhere, with no rust other than some rusty water stains below the radiator area. See photos. There are some minor dents near the bumper bracket holes, but these areas are easy to repair when doing the the installation. The important thing is there is no rust (I don't consider the exposed metal near the bumper bracket holes to really be a problem, it is superficial only).

If you need a good used nose for your restoration, this one may be the answer. Since the original noses are not available right now (as of Jan '16), this might be a reasonable alternative.

SHIPPING. I can send this UPS or Fedex Ground, but due to the size, there is a $60 charge, meaning shipping will be between $100 and $150 depending where you are. Shipping anywhere east of Denver will cost $150. Anything to the west of the Rockies will be in the $100-125 range. To keep ebay happy I have input a shipping cost of $150. If you are in CA, or elsewhere in the West, wait for me to correct the invoice prior to making payment. For international outside North America, I would expect the cost to be in the $400-800 range depending on the country.

Thanks for checking this out.
